

Deploying technology in professional services

It can be difficult for professionals to think of the expertise they provide as a marketable service. Yet their offer can be changed, improved, marketed and withdrawn just like any other. Even product design principles, if adapted, can be used to improve both revenue and margin. One of these, the effective deployment of technology within the changing service experience, is particularly relevant.

